Dear Colleagues –

This year’s meeting, organized in collaboration with Veterans Affairs Canada, provides an exciting and varied program in the beautiful city of Montréal. Our theme, Translation, Collaboration and Mutual Learning was selected to provide a forum to consider the multifaceted nature of trauma and to explore how we intensify and diversify our professional collaboration by actively reaching out to and hearing from those in related fields. In addition to the usual collection of high quality peer-reviewed presentations scheduled in the program, we are excited about several special features of this year’s 26th Annual Meeting:

- Plenary Speakers: This year’s meeting will begin with an evening keynote debate on early intervention between Dr. Richard Bryant of the University of New South Wales and Dr. Simon Wessely of the Institute of Psychiatry, Kings College, London. Retired LGen Romeo Dallaire will deliver an address based on his military experience entitled “Injured Not Sick”. Ms. Nontombi Naomi Tutu of Sister Sojourner and the Spiritual Alliance to Stop Intimate Violence will discuss lessons learnt from South Africa’s Truth and Reconciliation Committee. Dr. Roger Pitman of Harvard Medical School will discuss the potential for the use of a reconsolidation blockade in the treatment of PTSD.

- Featured Sessions: The program includes seven featured sessions. Dr. Simon Wessely will discuss the impact of the war in Iraq on the mental health of U.K. armed forces. Dr. Mark Creamer will lead a symposium on the challenges of disseminating best practice interventions in the trauma field. Dr. Yael Danielli and colleagues will report on their experience of ISTSS collaboration with the United Nations. Dr. Christine Courtois has coordinated two featured sessions that will discuss advances in the assessment and treatment of complex trauma and the phenomena of dissociation and dissociative disorders from differing theoretical perspectives. Dr. Alain Brunet has organized a full day of symposia that will explore recent advances in neuroplasticity and possible implications for the treatment of PTSD. Dr. Greg Reger and colleagues will provide an introduction to and present data on the use of new technologies to the treatment of PTSD.

- Master Clinician Demonstrations: This year we will be showcasing three different Master Clinicians — Dr. Pascale Brillon, Dr. Berthold Gersons and Dr. Markus Landolt will demonstrate interventions from their respective psychotherapy models.

- Pre-Meeting Institutes: Pre-Meeting Institutes are high-quality training opportunities on traumatic stress.

- Special Events: We hope to see you at the welcome reception on Thursday evening. Montréal is a fabulous city, offering a wide variety of different cultural and social experiences and we hope that you will have the chance to sample some of these during your stay. Throughout the duration of the meeting there will be opportunity to view exhibits of artwork prepared by members of Les Impatients of Montréal, a community-based centre favoring the expression and interpretation of therapeutic art. On Friday evening there will be showings in English and French of the film Shake Hands With the Devil. We look forward to a rich dialogue among this year’s attendees and we very much hope that you enjoy this year’s program and your time in Montréal.

The training programs will have the opportunity to recruit potential interns or postdoctoral residents, while the students will have the opportunity to locate these programs. Ask any questions they have about the experiences offered and the application process. Programs from across the United States will be invited and these programs will represent a diverse set of clinical interests including military and veterans, children, sexual assault, prison populations, refugees and general community. Additionally, representatives will be present at this event to discuss the Fulbright Program and the Peace Corp as opportunities for international study, training, research, exchange and collaboration. Continuing Education

Educational Need

The ISTSS Annual Meeting provides a forum for sharing research, clinical strategies, public policy concerns and theoretical formulations on trauma. It is an international assembly of professionals and students representing an array of disciplines including psychiatrists, psychologists, social workers, nurses, counselors, researchers, administrators, victim advocates, journalists, clergy and others with an interest in the study and treatment of traumatic stress. Speakers are strongly requested to avoid unnecessary jargon and to make their work and its implication to the traumatic stress field as accessible as possible to those who do not share their particular perspective and type of scientific approach. This is designed to facilitate increased understanding of what different types of research (e.g., basic scientists, clinical researchers) focusing on different types of traumatic stressors (e.g., child maltreatment, disasters, terrorism, war) using different research methods and perspectives (e.g., epidemiology, genetics, psychosocial, psychobiological) have found as well as what the implications of their work are for the traumatic stress field. Our aspirational goal is to establish a jargon-free zone in which experts maximize communication of their work, findings and implications in a way that facilitates understanding and cross-fertilization among researchers, clinicians, and policy makers from other perspectives.

Educational Objectives

Participants of the ISTSS Annual Meeting will be able to:

• Examine the multi-dimensional effects of trauma
• Integrate the processes involved in translational research
• Describe benefits of interdisciplinary collaboration in improving our conceptualization of trauma effects
• Demonstrate such benefits in improving intervention applications and in the dissemination of research findings

Target Audience

This meeting is appropriate for attorneys, counselors, educators, journalists/media experts, marriage and family therapists, nurses, physicians, policy makers, psychiatrists, psychologists, researchers, social workers, victim advocates and students interested in traumatic stress for individuals, families and communities.

When Bad Things Happen to You, the First Person You Need to See Should Not Be One of Us (Debate)

Richard Bryant, PhD1; Simon Wessely, MD2

1University of New South Wales, Sydney, Australia
2Institute of Psychiatry, King’s College London, London, United Kingdom

This debate will tackle the issue of early intervention following exposure to a traumatic event. It will adopt the format of a two-sided debate in which the protagonists will argue either case. The affirmative position will argue for the case that following a traumatic event, survivors do not need mental health professionals interfering with the natural recovery process that people typically utilize. In contrast, the negative perspective will argue that there are numerous benefits in early intervention, and these benefits outweigh any potential disadvantages. Across both arguments there will be reliance on current evidence, anecdotal experience, and personal bias. The outcome of the debate will be dependent on the audience’s aptitude in discerning solid argument from loquacious rambling.

Thursday, November 4, 9:30 a.m. – 10:45 a.m.

Injured, Not Sick

LGen the Honourable Roméo A. Dallaire (Ret’d), Senator, OC, CMM, GOQ, MSC, CD

LGen the Honourable Roméo A. Dallaire (Ret’d), Senator will draw on his extensive experience and knowledge to discuss various important topics including the impact of peer support, and the complexity of the ethical, moral and legal dilemmas created by blasts, explosions and other traumas. He will argue that more specific research on the impact of operational stress on security personnel must be pursued to reduce and attenuate the scale of casualties.

The Honourable Roméo Dallaire had a distinguished career in the Canadian military, achieving the rank of lieutenant-general and assistant deputy minister of human resources. In 1994, General Dallaire commanded the United Nations Assistance Mission for Rwanda (UNAMIR). His experiences there became the subject of the book Shake hands with the devil: The failure of humanity in Rwanda, which was awarded the Governor General’s Literary Award for Non-Fiction in 2004 and was the basis of a full-length feature film released in 2007. Medically released in 2000, due to PTSD, Senator Dallaire has worked as an author, lecturer and humanitarian, conducting research on conflict resolution and child soldiers at the Kennedy School at Harvard. He is now continuing his research on child soldiers and is about to publish a second book on this subject. General Dallaire helped reform the assistance provided to the new generation of veterans particularly affected by posttraumatic stress disorder. General Dallaire was appointed to the Senate effective March 24, 2005, and is the vice-chair of the Senate Standing Committee on National Security and Defence. He was appointed with Bishop Desmond Tutu to the United Nations Secretary General’s Advisory Committee on Genocide Prevention in the spring of 2006 and is a fellow at the Montréal Institute of Genocide Studies, Concordia University. He is an officer in the Order of Canada since 2002, a recipient of the Pearson Peace Medal in 2005, and a grand officer of the Order of Québec in 2006.

The Honorable Jean-Pierre Blackburn, Minister of Veterans Affairs
L’ Honorable Jean-Pierre Blackburn, Ministre de Anciens Combattants

Jean-Pierre Blackburn was first elected to the House of Commons in 1984 and re-elected in 1988, 2006 and 2008. He was sworn in as Minister of Veterans Affairs on January 19, 2010. Prior to that, he was appointed Minister of Labour and Minister of State (Economic Development Agency of Canada for the Regions of Quebec) in February 2006, and in October 2008 was named Minister of National Revenue and Minister of State (Agriculture). He has also served as Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister of Defence.

Minister Blackburn has been a teacher, administrator and businessman. From 1974 to 1984, Mr. Blackburn held the position of CEO of the Société d’initiatives et de développement des artères commerciales in Chicoutimi. He was also president of a business development and public relations firm in Jonquière.

Minister Blackburn holds a bachelor’s degree in business administration and a master’s degree in regional studies and intervention from the Université du Québec à Chicoutimi.

M. Blackburn possède un baccalauréat en administration des affaires et une maîtrise en études et interventions régionales de l’Université du Québec à Chicoutimi.

Telling Our Stories and Listening With Open Ears, Hearts and Minds to the Stories of Others

Nontombi Naomi Tutu
Sister Sojourner/ Spiritual Alliance to Stop Intimate Violence (SAIV), Nashville, Tennessee, USA

Part of the power of South Africa’s Truth and Reconciliation Commission (TRC) was the opportunity it offered to the victims and survivors of human rights abuses to tell their stories to the world. Taking that as a model this presentation looks at how we are encouraged or discouraged to tell our stories and whose stories we are willing to hear. It also will look at some of the lessons received from the TRC’s shortcomings in terms of taking into account the cultural context in which people are given the power to speak or stopped from speaking.

The challenges of growing up black and female in apartheid South Africa have led Naomi Tutu to her present as an activist for human rights. Those experiences taught how much we all lose when any of us are judged purely on physical attributes. In her speeches she blends the passion for human dignity with humor and personal stories.

Ms. Tutu is the third child of Archbishop Desmond and Nomalizo Leah Tutu. She was born in South Africa and has also lived in Lesotho, the United Kingdom and the United States. She was educated in Swaziland, the U.S. and England, and has divided her adult life between South Africa and the U.S. Growing up the ‘daughter of Desmond Tutu’ has offered Naomi Tutu many opportunities and challenges in her life. Most important of these has been the challenge to find her own place in the world. She has taken up the challenge and channeled the opportunities that she has been given to raise her voice as a champion for the dignity of all.

J. N. Tutu, is a single mother of three and currently lives in Nashville, Tennessee, USA.

Her professional experience ranges from being a development consultant in West Africa, to being program coordinator for programs on race and gender and gender-based violence in education at the African Gender Institute at the University of Cape Town. In addition Ms. Tutu has taught at the Universities of Hartford and Connecticut and Brevard College in North Carolina.

She started her public speaking as a college student at Berea College in Kentucky in the 1970’s when she was invited to speak at churches, community groups, colleges and universities about her experiences growing up in apartheid South Africa. Since that time she has become a much sought after speaker to groups as varied as business associations, professional conferences, elected officials and church and civic organizations. Ms. Tutu has also led Truth and Reconciliation Workshops for groups dealing with different types of conflict. Together with Rose Bator she presents a workshop titled “Building Bridges” dealing with issues of race and racism. The two also lead women’s retreats through their organization Sister Sojourner. They are also writing a book provisionally titled I don’t think of you as black: Honest conversations on race and racism.

In addition to speaking, Ms. Tutu is a consultant to two organizations which reflect the breadth of her involvement in issues of human rights. The organizations are the Spiritual Alliance to Stop Intimate Violence (SAIV), founded by renowned author Riane Eisler and Nobel Peace Prize Laureate Betty Williams, and the Foundation for Hospices in Sub-Saharan Africa (FHSSA).

Reconsolidation Blockade: A Novel Treatment for PTSD?

Roger Pitman, MD
Harvard Medical School, Boston, Massachusetts, USA

A core feature of posttraumatic stress disorder (PTSD) is the aversive memory of a traumatic event that is characterized by excessive strength, immalleability, and persistence. We have described such memories as “overconsolidated.” Traditional theory holds that once a memory has been placed into long-term storage, i.e., consolidated, it exists as a permanent trace. According to this view, the most one can hope for therapeutically is to inhibit the memory’s expression, but this inhibition is fragile, and the associated distress and arousal may return. Recent animal research has challenged this permanency by suggesting that reactivation (retrieval) of a memory can return it to a labile state from which it must be “re-consolidated” if it is to persist. Blocking reconsolidation offers the therapeutic possibility of weakening traumatic memories in PTSD. A recent Pavlovian differential conditioning study in normal humans employed memory reactivation accompanied by the beta-adrenergic blocker propranolol. Thereafter the previously acquired conditioned stimulus (CS) could no longer be made to elicit a fear response. In contrast, the declarative memory of the contingency survived, suggesting that only the memory’s fear component was erased - a potentially ideal scenario from the clinical standpoint. Another recent normal human conditioning study substituted a behavioral intervention. A single CS reactivation trial was followed by a 10-minute delay, and then by further extinction trials. The conditioned fear response was not merely inhibited but permanently eliminated. It was argued that the delay was a sufficient period of time for the fear memory trace to return to a labile state, so that the remaining CS presentations occurred during a “reconsolidation window.” This allowed the original fear memory to be modified or “updated” to incorporate the new information that the CS was no longer dangerous. The investigators suggested that such a delay tactic could be incorporated into cognitive-behavioral therapy (CBT) to increase its efficacy. Years ago, Dr. Edna Foa characterized the mechanism behind exposure therapy as the incorporation of “corrective information.”

Although the preclinical studies are encouraging, the translational gap is wide. Critical differences between normal human experiments and PTSD include (in the latter) the more complex nature of the CS (e.g., a battle vs. a colored square), the stronger unconditioned stimulus (e.g., a gunshot wound vs. a mild shock), greater and more sustained arousal at the time of the event (i.e., a stronger unconditioned response), the possible presence of multiple conditioning events, and the longer duration between the memory’s formation and the intervention (e.g., months or years vs. a day). Nevertheless, the only published reconsolidation blockade-like study in PTSD to date found evidence that propranolol administered at the time of traumatic memory reactivation diminished the memory’s emotional component, as manifest in smaller psychophysiological responses during subsequent script-driven imagery. These results are very preliminary, and many additional studies will be required to determine whether the therapeutic promise of reconsolidation blockade or modification will be fulfilled.

Dr. Roger Pitman is a psychiatrist at Massachusetts General Hospital (MGH) and Professor of Psychiatry at Harvard Medical School, Boston, MA. He served as a psychiatrist in the U.S. Navy during the Vietnam era and went on to complete a 30-year career in the Department of Veterans Affairs prior to moving to MGH. He is the recipient of the International Society for Traumatic Stress Studies’ Award for Outstanding Scientific Achievement in the field of PTSD and its Lifetime Achievement Award. Dr. Pitman’s research into the psychobiology of posttraumatic stress disorder (PTSD) spans more than 25 years. He has more than 100 peer-reviewed publications on PTSD and more than 200 overall publications in the general psychiatric and medical literature. He has authored or co-authored numerous structural and functional neuroimaging studies of PTSD. For the past 12 years, he has been conducting a large-scale, psychobiologic investigation of a national sample of monozygotic twins discordant for combat exposure in Vietnam. His current major research interest is whether medications administered at the time of traumatic memory reactivation can weaken traumatic memories through reconsolidation blockade, which represents a potential novel treatment for PTSD.

What Have Been and What Will Be the Mental Health Consequences of the War in Iraq on U.K. Service Personnel?

What has been the impact of the war in Iraq on the mental health of the United Kingdom Armed Forces? Our early data showed a low prevalence of PTSD and the lack of an “Iraq” effect on the mental health of regular forces, but not reserves. We now have a complete follow up (n=10,000) of the same cohort in 2008/2009, by which time many had either redeployed to Iraq/Afghanistan or had their first deployment. This is thus the first U.K. epidemiologically defined prospective data on the impact of the war on mental health, including not just PTSD, but other mental health problems, alcohol, family and marital problems, physical health and mTBI.

Both the U.S. and U.K. are all volunteer forces, fighting the same enemy, on the same terrain and facing the same hazards. We are also now collecting data in similar ways. Differences in mental health outcomes are thus of mutual interest. Many of these differences in the rates of mental health problems between the U.S. and U.K. are explicable taking into account differences in force structure, demographics, tour length and combat exposure. But other differences cannot be explained by these factors. There remain considerable differences in the rates of mTBI, and the absence of the dramatic increase in PTSD that has been reported from the U.S. in service personnel once they return home. These transnational differences, that would not be visible in studies restricted to one military or the other, are an opportunity to better understand the complex dynamics of mental health both during and after military deployment.

Promoting Recovery Following Trauma: Translating the Evidence Base Into Practice

The evidence base to inform effective treatments for PTSD has grown substantially, with large numbers of well controlled trials appearing in the literature in the last two decades. The best research evidence is of little value in improving outcomes for people with PTSD, however, unless routine clinical practice changes as a result. The challenge now is one of knowledge transfer - disseminating the research evidence in a way that achieves actual changes in practice. This panel brings together practical examples from Europe, the U.K., Australia and the U.S. to illustrate the challenges of disseminating best practice interventions following disaster and trauma, and to explore strategies and solutions. The presenters will discuss dissemination of international guidelines for psychosocial response to disaster (the European TENTS project), the implementation of evidence based treatment for PTSD across a large U.S. service system, and strategies to promote adoption of national PTSD clinical practice guidelines on two continents (U.K. and Australia). Brief presentations will be followed by a panel discussion, with audience members encouraged to participate through questions and comments.

Complex Traumatic Stress Disorders: An Update on Treatment Models and Types of Intervention

Complex traumatic stress disorders result from interpersonal trauma that is repetitive/chronic/cumulative, often over the course of childhood, and during significant developmental epochs; involve direct harm and/or neglect and abandonment by caregivers or other responsible adults; often create attachment insecurity and have great potential to severely compromise a child's development. The aftereffects of such trauma are similarly complex and have been found to exceed the triadic criteria of the more classic type of Posttraumatic Stress Disorder. As a result, treatment must be oriented towards other symptoms and issues in addition to those that comprise PTSD as defined in the DSM-IV-TR and are often applied in a treatment sequence that begins with an emphasis on assessment, safety, life stabilization, and emotional regulation. These papers describe advances have been made in the assessment and treatment of complex traumatic disorders in a variety of populations and a variety of settings. The presenters will describe recently developed models and studies that contribute to the evidence-base concerning their effectiveness in treating this compounded traumatic stress disorders.

Advances in PTSD Treatment: Novel Approaches in the Modulation of the Human Fear Memory

Recent translational research in the area of fear and memory suggest that blocking (re)consolidation with propranolol and the potentiation of extinction learning with D-Cycloserine (DCS) are two promising treatment avenues for conditions that have at their core an over consolidated emotional memory, such as PTSD. The two compounds are often discussed together as exemplars of a new approach in psychiatry which aims at repairing the brain via Neuroplasticity. This series of four symposia bring together a number of experts to discuss the current status of this research area and its future directions.

Experts in the Field of Dissociation Studies Discuss Dissociation and the Dissociative Disorders

From the time of Sigmund Freud and Pierre Janet, dissociation has been recognized as a response to traumatic circumstances and as a key element of peri- and posttraumatic response and Posttraumatic Stress Disorder. Currently, five dissociative disorders as included in the DSM-IV-TR and these are under review for the revised edition, DSM-V. The presenters in this symposium will address the phenomena of dissociation and the dissociative disorders from several different perspectives: phenomenological/subjective; psychoanalytic; neurophysiological; and treatment outcome research. Presenters [two of whom have just co-edited the definitive text Dissociation and the dissociative disorders: DSM-V and beyond (Dell & O’Neil, 2009) and all of whom have published important papers and books] have extensive experience with the study and treatment of dissociation.

Technology-Based Trauma Assistance for Service Members, Veterans, and Their Families

Conflicts in Iraq and Afghanistan have resulted in significant trauma-related needs for many Service Members, Veterans, and their families. Concerns can include a complex mix of psychological health and traumatic brain injury needs and several barriers negatively impact getting help to those who require it. First, individuals requiring assistance may reside in geographically remote areas relative to facilities that offer resources. Stigma continues to pose a significant barrier to care for many and treatments that have been useful for a range of trauma populations have been less effective with individuals with combat-related trauma. Technology may offer solutions to many of these challenges by providing increased access to resources that can be utilized in an anonymous fashion and which may offer improvements in the quality of care delivered. This featured session includes four symposia that review the use of virtual reality and virtual worlds, telehealth, web applications, and mobile devices to improve the lives of our Warriors.

Le traitement spécifique des cauchemars post-traumatiques
(Pratique, Recherche Clinique)

Cinquante-deux pour cent à 90% des victimes souffrant de trouble de stress post-traumatique (TSPT) présentent régulièrement des cauchemars récurrents et perturbants qui entraînent beaucoup de détresse. La présence de cauchemars n’est pas anodine pour une victime : ceux-ci affectent de façon très négative la qualité de son sommeil, sa capacité de récupération, son état d’énergie, ses capacités de concentration et son humeur générale. Ils favorisent souvent l’insomnie ainsi que des sentiments de terreur et d’impuissance très souffrants. De plus, nous savons que les cauchemars post-traumatiques constituent une variable importante qui prédit de façon significative la chronicité à long terme du TSPT. Les cliniciens sont souvent démunis face à ce symptôme bien précis et bien que les stratégies de restructuration cognitive ou d’exposition peuvent parvenir à le diminuer, il reste que ces stratégies ne sont pas spécifiques aux cauchemars et que ceux-ci perdurent souvent dans le temps. La présente conférence vise à présenter de façon concrète la stratégie de Révision et d’Exposition aux cauchemars post-traumatiques (« imagery rehearsal ») qui permet souvent une baisse de la fréquence et de l’intensité des rêves entraînant de la détresse. Ainsi, les étapes de la narration du cauchemar, de la rédaction de son scénario, de la révision et de la modification de celui-ci, de la ré-écriture et de la désensibilisation seront présentées. Les effets sur le sentiment de contrôle de la victime ainsi que sur la qualité de son sommeil seront aussi présentés. Enfin, les contre-indications à cette stratégie ainsi que les caractéristiques à mettre en place afin d’en maximiser l’efficacité seront explicitées.

Détresse des participants: Les participants pourraient trouver la description du trauma ainsi que le contenu des cauchemars perturbants.

The Specific Treatment of the Posttraumatic Nightmares
(Practice, Clin Res)

Intermediate

Fifty-two percent - 90% of the victims suffering from posttraumatic stress disorder (PTSD) regularly experience recurrent and disturbing nightmares which cause a great deal of distress. The presence of nightmares is not trivial for a victim: they have a strong negative affect on the quality of sleep, capacity to recuperate, level of energy, ability to concentrate and their general mood. Victims of posttraumatic stress often tend to experience insomnia as well as the feelings suffering and helplessness. Furthermore, we know that the posttraumatic nightmares constitute an important variable which significantly predicts the chronicity of PTSD. Clinicians are often at a loss faced with this specific symptom, and although strategies of cognitive restructuring or exposure can diminish it, it remains that these strategies do not specifically target nightmares and that these symptoms very often persist. This presentation aims at introducing in a concrete manner the strategy of Review and Exposure to posttraumatic nightmares (“imagery rehearsal”) which often diminishes the frequency and intensity of dreams that cause distress. Thus, stages of the nightmare narration, the writing of scenario, its revision and modification of, rewriting and desensitizing will be presented. Effects on the victim’s sense of control, as well as on the quality of his/her sleep will also be introduced. Finally, contraindications for using this strategy, as well as steps for maximizing its effectiveness will be proposed.

Participant Distress: The participants may find the description of the trauma as well as the content of the disturbing nightmares distressing.

Brief Eclectic Psychotherapy for PTSD

Brief eclectic psychotherapy (BEP) has been developed as a 16-session treatment manual for PTSD (www.traumatreatment.eu) when CBT and EMDR were not available. BEP consists of (1) psychoeducation, together with a partner or close friend; (2) imaginal exposure preceded by relaxation exercises, focused on catharsis of emotions of grief and helplessness; (3) writing tasks to express aggressive feelings and use of mementos; (4) domain of meaning, focused on learning from the trauma, oneself and the world; (5) farewell ritual, to end treatment. The BEP-protocol has shown to be effective in RCT’s for police officers and other traumatised patients as well. Also psychobiological recovery has been proofed. BEP is equally effective as CBT and EMDR. In the Master Clinician Workshop the different elements of BEP will be shown on DVD and the essentials of every element will be highlighted and discussed will be similarities and differences with CBT and EMDR. To summarize, CBT, EMDR and BEP are equally effective in reducing PTSD by different forms of exposure. BEP also offers essential learning from the traumatizing events and stimulates posttraumatic growth. Cases of participants will be discussed.

Participant Distress: DVDs will show strong emotions related to traumatic events like shooting and death of a child at delivery.

Berthold Gersons, MD is a psychiatrist, distinguished AMC-professor and professor of psychiatry at the Academical Medical Center of the University of Amsterdam, the Netherlands, and senior scientific advisor, Foundation Centrum 45, Diemen, The Netherlands. In 1980 he started research on trauma and PTSD in the police force and he established the first self-help team in Dutch police force. Currently 10% of the Dutch police officers are member of the ‘occupational support teams’ after trauma. He developed the Brief Eclectic Psychotherapy (BEP) protocol consisting of 16 sessions for police officers and other trauma-I victims and showed the effectiveness in randomised trials. BEP has been recognized in the NICE Guidelines (2005). He has been advisor for the Dutch Government after major disasters in the Netherlands, like the El Al air crash in 1992 and the Enschede firework disaster in 2000. He has been a member of the Board of the Dutch Veterans Institute and was an advisor for the Ministry of Defence. He is adviser to the National Coordinator for Counterterrorism to help politicians under threat to cope. His group with Dr. Miranda Olff is active in research on treatment and biological factors. He has been member of the board of the Journal of Traumatic Stress, of the Board of the ISTSS and ESTSS. He has been president of the European Society of Traumatic Stress Studies and president of the Dutch Language Oriented Society for Psychotrauma. He has published over 200 papers in scientific journals and books and has lectured around 500 in his home country and in various countries all over the world.

Panel Presentation
Panel presentations include 3-4 participants discussing a common theme, issue or question. Panels may include short statements during which panelists outline diverse or similar approaches to the same question. Panels are typically more interactive than symposia, involving active discussion among the panelists.

Paper Session
Papers sessions are individual presentations of no more than 15 minutes on a topic related to traumatic stress, typically including the presentation of research data.

Poster Session
Poster sessions are individual presentations in a poster format on a topic related to traumatic stress, typically including the presentation of research data.

Pre-Meeting Institute (PMI)
Institutes are full- or half-day sessions that provide opportunities for intensive training on topics integral to the conference program, presented by leaders in the field.

Media Presentation
Media sessions present a segment of film, video, music, drama, literature, artwork or other form of media relevant to traumatic stress, along with discussion.
